

SP1500 INDUSTRY PRICE MOMENTUM[®]

AUGUST: A NECESSARY PAUSE

Back in July, our SP1500 INDUSTRY PRICE MOMENTUM[®] model demonstrated strong and upbeat price momentum. The number of industry upgrades in the SP1500 was the largest in thirteen months and it resulted in high positive STAGE 2 weightings in all three indices. But in our model, whenever the market cap in STAGE 2 (positive) reaches 80% or more it means that momentum is about “as good as it gets.” It also suggests that a market correction should be expected in coming weeks or months. In other words, July was a good month for market performance, but it also forecasted that August and September could be a time of consolidation. Thus, the pullback in the marketplace at the end of August is not a surprise.

Although our SP1500 INDUSTRY PRICE MOMENTUM[®] model is designed to detect emerging and fading industry leadership in each S&P index, it has often been good at macro market calls. In 2013 the extremely high positive readings seen at the end of January, April and recently in July, preceded pullbacks in the indices. Pullbacks are routine and healthy in a bull market cycle; plus, they help to extend the longer term advance. At the end of August the market cap weighting in STAGE 2 was 53.9% in the SP500, 59.5% in the SP400 and 69.8% in the SP600. These are all normal bull market weightings.

In August; there were only 3 momentum upgrades and 41 downgrades; none of these represented major shifts in momentum. See page 4 for details. It is interesting to note that despite all the volatility in August, two sectors bucked the “deceleration” trend and ended the month with no change in their overall momentum weightings: Energy and Telecom. Technology had no momentum changes in SP400 and SP600. See page 5 for details on sector shifts and momentum weightings for August.

One downgrade that caught our attention was the shift from STAGE 1 to STAGE 0 in the SP500 Metals & Mining industry. This shift reversed a positive shift (STAGE 0 to STAGE 1) that took place one month earlier. We call this backwardation shift “waffling” at the bottom of the CURVE and it can occur at the end of an extended bear market cycle for an industry. However, a simultaneous downgrade in SP400 Metals & Mining reveals broader momentum deterioration may be present in this industry.

The Momentum Curve[®] for each S&P index is shown on pages 6, 9 and 12.

Quick snapshots of August’s changes are found on pages 3 and 4. A more detailed description of the price momentum status of each S&P index and each of the ten sectors of each index is seen on page 5. Tables of year to date and month to date performance for all industries are found on pages 8, 11 and 14. Components of all indices by sector and industry are found on pages 17-28. A description of our model is found on page 29.

AUGUST'S MOMENTUM SHIFTS ARE BEST EXPRESSED BY THE NUMBERS:

- August's momentum readings reflected the 4.6% peak-to-trough correction seen in the SP500 during the month. In the broad SP1500, 3 industries had momentum upgrades and 41 had downgrades. Of the 41 downgrades, all but one was a shift from STAGE 2 to STAGE 3, a symptom of decelerating momentum.
- The one downgrade that was not into STAGE 3 was a backward shift from STAGE 1 to STAGE 0 for the SP500 Metals & Mining industry. This shift reversed a positive shift (STAGE 0 to STAGE 1) that took place one month earlier. We call this backwardation shift "waffling" at the bottom of the CURVE; and it often materializes near the end of a long bear market cycle for an industry. However in the SP400, Metals & Mining also downshifted from STAGE 2 to STAGE 3 (deceleration) this month. This combination of downgrades suggests the underlying momentum for Metals & Mining was generally deteriorating in August.
- In August, the total market capitalization in positive STAGE 2 fell in the SP500 from 89.1 to 53.9%, dropped from 75.8% to 59.5% in the SP400, and declined from 90.3% to 69.8% in the SP600. Nevertheless, market capitalization in STAGE 0 (negative) moved only slightly higher in the SP500 from 3.8% to 4.6%; remained at 0.0% in the SP400 and inched up from 0.0% to 0.3% in the SP600. See pages 6, 9 and 12. The big declines seen in positive momentum should not be a surprise. The extremely high concentration of market capitalization in STAGE 2 (positive) seen in the S&P indices in recent months was, as we noted earlier, a warning. Whenever the market capitalization in STAGE 2 reaches 80% or more, our model signals that the market's momentum is about "as good as it gets" and that a market correction should be expected. As we stated last month, "July was a good month for the market, but August and September may be a time of consolidation."
- In August the percentage of industries in STAGE 2 versus STAGE 0 was: 59% to 3% in the SP500, 65% versus none in the SP400, and 69% versus 2% in the SP600. See page 15. Last month, the STAGE 2 percentages recorded by our model were the highest since the 89% recorded in April 2010 in the SP500, the 77% seen in May 2001 in the SP400 and the 93% made in the SP600 in April 2010. Again, our model warned that a market correction could materialize in coming months. The downshifts in momentum are healthy for the longer term.
- The confirmed upgrades to positive price momentum in AUGUST (STAGE 1 → STAGE 2) were:
 - SP500: None
 - SP400: Auto Components; Food & Staples Retail
 - SP600: None
- The confirmed downgrades to negative price momentum in AUGUST (STAGE 3 → STAGE 0) were:
 - SP500: None
 - SP400: None
 - SP600: None

August Snapshot

INDUSTRIES IN SAME MOMENTUM STAGE IN MULTIPLE S&P INDICES*

The AUGUST SNAPSHOT table to the right is a quick summary of the status of this month's momentum model. The table only includes industries that are in the same stage of momentum in at least two of the three S&P style indices. This helps to identify industries experiencing a singular broad-based price momentum trend.

Blue highlighting identifies new additions to the table this month. Bold identifies industries that have the same momentum in all three S&P style indices.

There were 11 additions to this table this month. All of these were to STAGE 3 (positive, but decelerating momentum). The downgrades came from eight of the ten S&P sectors, which was a reflection of the broad-based retreat in prices that occurred in August.

Note that most price action is currently taking place at the top of the MOMENTUM CURVE (STAGES 2 AND 3) and there are no industries concentrated at the bottom of the CURVE (STAGES 0 AND 1). This is typical of a mature bull market cycle.

The momentum of all industries is seen in the MOMENTUM CURVES of each S&P index on pages 6, 9 and 12.

Industries added this month are in blue. Bold font identifies industries with the same momentum pattern throughout the S&P indices (some industries are not represented in each S&P style index). Industries listed in the table have the same momentum in at least 2 indices. See page 4 for details of new*

AUGUST'S RESULTS

In the MARKET CAPITALIZATION table to the near right, blue shading helps to identify the concentration of momentum in each of the 10 sectors and within each S&P style index. For twelve consecutive months the concentration of blue remained consistently in STAGE 2 (positive leadership), but this began to break down in August.

The table to the far right titled CAPITALIZATION SHIFTS helps to identify where the price momentum shifts took place during the month.

Red indicates a shift out of a stage while green indicates a shift into a momentum stage. Red is concentrated in STAGES 2 AND 1 this month, and most all shifts were into STAGE 3 (deceleration). This is a reflection of the pullback seen in stock prices in August. Note the concentration of positive momentum in Energy (all indices) and SP600 Technology. SP500 Telecom and SP600 Utilities have 100% of momentum in STAGE 3.

The tables to the right provide a quick snap shot of the distribution of, and change in, this month's momentum for each S&P index.

The first table lists the market weighting of each sector within each index. In this table we have shaded in blue the momentum "stage" that dominates each sector's trend. "Stages" reflect momentum that is: emerging (Stage 1), positive (Stage 2), decelerating (Stage 3) or declining (Stage 0). The pattern of blue seen vertically (by Stage 1, 2, 3, 0) helps to define the momentum of each S&P style index. The pattern of blue seen horizontally describes the momentum within each sector. In most cases, a sector's momentum is a mixture of the four stages of momentum.

The table to the far right is a snapshot of the changes that occurred this month in each sector. Increases are noted in green; decreases are noted in red.

Momentum Model Explanation

Our S&P price momentum model is based on the 1960s work of E.S.C. Coppock, a recipient of the 1989 Market Technicians Association's award for notable contributions to the field of technical analysis. The goal of Coppock's momentum work is to smooth a price series in order to make the peaks and troughs in rate-of-change data significant. The equation is as follows:

$$\text{LTM} = \frac{\text{Cn} \cdot 10 + \text{Cn}-1 \cdot 9 + \text{Cn}-2 \cdot 8 + \dots + \text{Cn}-9 \cdot 1}{10 + 9 + 8 + \dots + 1}$$

Where $\text{Cn} = \frac{\text{X} + \text{Z}}{2}$

LTM = Long-term momentum
 Cn = Average rate of change this month (n)
 X = 11-month rate of change
 Z = 14-month rate of change

Smoothed momentum (often referred to as Coppock's Curve) looks and acts much like a sine curve. It also has characteristics of an overbought/oversold oscillator, as it moves from positive price momentum (overbought) to negative momentum (oversold) and back again. There is a strong tendency for long-term momentum (LTM) to roll over, or decelerate, prior to a peak in actual prices. In short, sell signals tend to be early, or leading, indicators of actual price peaks. Conversely, buy signals – marked by troughs in LTM – are coincident or lagging indicators of actual price lows. They reflect an improvement in price changes.

Definition of stages

We have segmented four stages of price momentum. Stage 0 and Stage 2 identify relatively stable trends in momentum – negative and positive, respectively – whereas Stage 1 and Stage 3 identify changes in momentum. These stages tend to be more volatile and less stable.

Stage 1:	Stage 2:	Stage 3:	Stage 0:
Numbers upticking but still negative; Represents bear trend/emerging bull trend; An improving trend	Numbers positive and rising; Represents a bullish and outperforming trend	Numbers positive but declining; Represents a bull correction or early bearish trend; A decelerating trend	Numbers negative and declining; Represent bearish and underperforming trend

A speculative and early buy signal is generated whenever a group shifts from Stage 0 to Stage 1. However, due to the volatility seen at the bottom of the curve, a consistent three to four months in Stage 1 helps define emerging leadership status.

A shift from Stage 1 to 2 confirms a positive trend. An early warning is provided whenever a group shifts from Stage 2 to Stage 3. However, a period of three to four months in Stage 3 is our filter for confirming a true deterioration in the long-term bullish trend.

A shift from Stage 3 to Stage 0 is a late but confirming sell signal.

The long-term nature of this momentum analysis strives to eliminate whipsaws. It is important to note, however, that the momentum of a bull market correction and the beginning of a bear trend are the same. Conversely, the momentum seen in a bear market rally is the same as an emerging bull market. Therefore, groups can shift back and forth between Stage 0 and Stage 1 or Stage 2 and Stage 3. Analysis of the individual chart patterns within the industry group can help distinguish between a reversal and a correction in the major cycle.

How to use long-term momentum

The long-term momentum can be used in various ways, depending on an investor's strategies, goals, and general view of the overall market. Investors looking for solid upward momentum should emphasize groups in Stage 2. If one's objective is to find emerging groups, look for new ideas in Stage 1, particularly recent shifts from Stage 0 to Stage 1. If an investor is high-risk, high-return-oriented, screening through late Stage 0 can sometimes prove fruitful because buy signals can lag an actual turn in price. If one is looking to raise cash, groups in Stage 3 should generate good ideas for new sell candidates, whereas groups new to Stage 0 are the most obvious stocks to avoid.

S&P industry price momentum is useful as a general market indicator. Looking at the total percentages and weighted averages of groups in each stage helps to position the overall market.
